

MUSIC

JENNA DREY UNVEILS 'SEATTLE' VIDEO IN HOUSTON

<< Robert Ellis, Hayes Carll nominated for Americana awards | Main | Haven to create its own haven: a restaurant within a restaurant >>

JOEY GUERRA AT 12:00 PM ON JUNE 1, 2012

Michael Paulsen/Houston Chronicle photo

Jenna Drey's new single is called 'Summer Night in Seattle.' But the Houston-bred singer still has plenty of love for her hometown.

The new clip -- which you can see below for the first time -- was filmed in Houston a month ago by director Donald Kilgore. Locations included the Drake nightclub and Hermann Park.

Drey has scored a slew of hits in clubs and at dance radio, including 'Killin' Me, 'Why Should I Believe You' and 'By the Way.' A new album is in the works.

She'll perform at this year's Pride Festival, June 23 in Montrose. Also on the bill are Sarah Golden and Hoja Lopez, both seen earlier this year on 'The Voice.' The entire day is free and will feature music, booths and lots of (sweaty) fabulousness. (The Pride Parade follows at 8:15 p.m.)

Wonderland Houston, a Pride circuit party, will also feature Drey, DJ Michael Tank and cirque aerialists. Tickets start at $30.

POST NEW COMMENT

Unregistered users' comments are moderated. Want your comment to post immediately? Register.

Your name:

E-mail:

The content of this field is kept private and will not be shown publicly.

/ Home / / Bars / / Restaurants / / Alison Cook / / Music / / Movies / / Arts & Theater / / Time Suck / / Guides / / Events

About us / Privacy statement / Terms of service

© Copyright 2012 29-95